3 Fire Depts. Called Out by Farm Fire

Fire, which broke out in a barn on the Fred Scheel farm in New Lenox township a few miles west of Mokena, spread so rapidly that it was necessary to call out three fire departments from nearby communities in order to save the rest of the farm buildings. The blaze broke out about 10 a. m., and continued to burn all day. A tractor, soy beans, hay and other contents of the building burned. No live stock was lost.

The Mokena Fire Department was called first, then Ridgewood and then Orland Park.

Lack of water hampered the firemen. Fred Rauch and Chas. Burkhardt of the Mokena Oil Co., did a fine piece of work when they unloaded their gasoline tank trucks at their plant in Mokena and then filled the tanks with water from the Mokena water mains and rushed the water supply to the fire scene. Farmers also hauled water in milk cans. The Ridgewood and Orland departments brought some water with their booster tanks. A large barn about 75 feet from the burning building caught fire several times, but the blaze was extinguished before it could get a start.

The roof of a concrete block silo was burned off.

Mr. Scheel was just recently appointed a member of the board of trustees of the newly created fire district in New Lenox township and was the first member to have a fire on his place.

Two armed bandits, one about 36 years old, the other about 40 years old, staged a holdup about 12:30 Tuesday night in the tavern of James Fitzgerald on the Lincoln Highway in New Lenox.

There were six patrons in the place and they were forced into the basement thru a trap door by the thugs who made no attempt to rob them with the exception of Wm. Marshall who was relieved of a dollar. The cash register was all cleaned out and Helen Dillon who operates a lunchroom in the tavern building was also robbed. The exact amount of the loot was not determined.

As the bandits left the tavern they used an ice pick to puncture a front and rear tire of each one of the automobiles parked in front of the tavern in order to prevent anyone following.

The home was very lovely with beautiful flowers sent to them by many friends. They also enjoyed many tokens of love, such as cards, from over fifty who remembered them on this occasion and they are indeed grateful for this.

The children presented their parents with a fine comfortable chair while the grand children chose as their gift, a floor lamp. A large hand painted picture of Mr. and Mrs. Gundersen painted by the father was also a gift of the grandchildren and children.

No invitations were sent out, but nevertheless a large host of relatives and friends wish to extend their best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Nieland.

At this organization meeting the plan will be explained, also how the money is to be raised and spent.

The tentative by-laws will be read and a date set for the next meeting at which the officers of the club are to be elected.

About 75 people are expected to attend this organization meeting. This promises to be a live wire organization and much good to the community will come from it according to present indications.

Everybody's Thankful Except Tom Turkey And—the Guy That Prints Your Calendar

By BOB WUNDERLIN

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
Thanksgiving Day (in most states of the Union) will be November 21st, this year.

Dig down deep into your old trunks up in the attic and find yourself a calendar of a few years ago. Then turn to the eleventh page—November. See that red number staring at you on the last Thursday?

No matter where a person lived in this country, he saw the same date marked with red. But this year that is different.

Some calendars place Thanksgiving on the 21st, and some on the 28th. Other companies, imbued with a deep desire to remain strictly nonpartisan, failed to mark either date, or else printed them both in red.

Printers were placed in such a dilemma only once before in this nation's history. That was back in 1705 when the scheduled Thanksgiving date was shifted around due to molasses. But more of that later.

For many years it has been the custom for the President of the United States to proclaim the last Thursday of November as Thanksgiving day. For years it was an established date. Vacation plans, school holidays, and even big intersectional and traditional grid contests were arranged for this date.

Request for Change.

Then last year President Roosevelt surprised the nation by issuing his famous "move it up a week" proclamation. It all happened this way: Lew Hahn, general manager of the National Retail Dry Goods association, wrote Harry Hopkins, secretary of commerce, a letter. The letter, ultimately handed to President Roosevelt, read:

"Retail merchants throughout the United States, who are, through the nature of their business, obliged to plan well in advance, are considerably disturbed at the moment over the possibility of the pre-Christmas period proving to be a week shorter this year than normal.

"It seems impossible to interest the general public in preparations for Christmas until the Thanksgiving day observance is out of the way, and, inasmuch as it is taken for granted that the President will issue his Thanksgiving day proclamation for the last Thursday of the month, November 30, this will mean that all the great volume of Christmas business will have to be transacted within the period of three weeks and two days.

"As of course, you know, the preparations which the American people make for the Christmas holiday play a tremendously important part in the economy of the nation.

"I think it is no exaggeration to say that from 12 to 15 per cent of the entire business of retail stores is transacted in the period between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Pre-Christmas Shopping.

"I have not sufficient temerity to seek to influence the President of the United States in connection with the Thanksgiving day proclamation, but it seemed to me that I should point out to you the situation as it is and to say that if any relief could be secured it would be not only good for business but for the public as well."

Mr. Hahn was just as surprised as you or I when the President announced that he intended moving Thanksgiving day ahead from the thirtieth of November to the twenty-third. He had had no idea of the move until notified by the newspapers.

Mr. Hahn, a staunch Republican, is 58, a resident of Ridgewood, N. J., and is an enthusiastic golfer.

Store Executive.

In 1928 he was made president of a 29-store chain of department stores. In 1932 he was appointed to the industrial board of NRA. He also was on the Roper advisory board for the department of commerce. His work with the "brain trust" completed, he returned to his position in New York as general manager of the National Retail Dry Goods association.

That's the picture of the man whose letter persuaded Mr. Roosevelt to give the turkey one week less of life.

Those first Thanksgiving days were big events on the social calendar of pioneering New England. Our historians tell us that the first Thanksgiving was held in 1621, in Plymouth and were, for the main, gastronomic pow-wows held largely for shrewd diplomatic conferences with the ever-ready-to-go-on-the-warpath Indians. Pumpkin pie and plum pudding were the savory invitations that lured the redskins from his wind-swept tepee down to the festive laden boards of the Pilgrims.

No Official Date.

While the Pilgrims set aside this day to greet their "fellow-men" and give thanks for the crops, there was no official date set for the observance.

In Boston, 10 years later, hungry colonists lined the shore, eagerly scanning the sky-line for a sight of the ship that had left for England six months before. Food was low; moral was low; the governor's wit however, was running on full steam.

He gathered them together and in order to preserve what little food they had left, declared that there should be held a "day of fast" to seek the Lord by prayer and fasting that he might hasten the voyage of the life-saving ship bearing provisions.

Towards evening on the "day of fast" a tree-top observer gave a shout of joy. "A speck in the distance. Mayhaps a sail."

Mindless of the wind and spray that flew over them, the colonists gathered on the coast-line and shouted in joy as the speck grew larger and larger.

Hunger and 'Tummy-Ache.'

The next day the pangs of hunger in the stomachs of those settlers turned to the gnawing pains of "tummy-ache" as the governor ordered a spontaneous Thanksgiving day and handed out provisions enough for all.

That first Boston Thanksgiving day, incidentally, was held on February 22, over a century before the birth of George Washington, "the father of his country." Premature but prophetically enough, cause for Thanksgiving.

In the years that followed, Thanksgiving days were observed, but not annually. Several times there were lapses in between years. When Thanksgiving days were finally held, they were marked by some special reason such as good harvests, deliverance from small-pox, good weather, and prayer for deliverance of the danger to their frontiers.

In 1705, after Thanksgiving days had been pretty well established, the town of Colechester, in Connecticut, postponed Thanksgiving one week due to a deficiency of molasses. The shortage was tragedy since in those early days, molasses was a "symbol" of Thanksgiving day, just as Easter eggs symbolize Easter to the kiddies and candy striped canes represent Christmas.

Too Much 'Molasses.'

This postponement caused the older Puritans to lament the fact that Thanksgiving day was fast becoming, "so much a thing of molasses and other good eatables, and so little a day of solemn religious ceremony."

During the Revolution, continental congress appointed Thanksgiving days which variously fell in April, May, July and December. From 1784 to 1789 there were no Thanksgiving days, but in the latter year, congress recommended to George Washington that a day be set aside for Thanksgiving that Americans might give thanks to the Almighty that the Constitution of the United States had been adopted.

George Washington, in 1795, set aside December 18 as Thanksgiving day that "we might thank Him that the insurrection had been suppressed." There is no record as to what the dry-goods merchants of that era said or wrote to him.

In 1816, President James Madison urged congress to name a Thanksgiving day in honor of peace. In 1863 Abraham Lincoln received and acted upon a suggestion to make the Thanksgiving day an annual affair. He recommended the same to congress—and advised that it be held in November. It has been a November day ever since.

And so, on November 21 of this year, by proclamations of the President and the governors of the various states, 32,000,000 turkeys will end their days on platters, surrounded by steaming potatoes, gleaming cranberries, luscious pumpkin pie and all the trimmings that go along to make Thanksgiving day the feast that it is.

A few states will continue to observe Thanksgiving on November 28, while several, as they did last year, will observe two Thanksgivings.

Pity the poor turkey.

How Much Food You Should Eat During the Day

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

MOST calorie charts give the amount of food that equals 100 calories so that if the overweight (or the underweight) wishes to know how much food equals 2,000, 3,000, or 4,000 calories, he tries to estimate it from this 100 calorie chart.

The following shows how much of, or the size of, some common foods which equal 100 calories:

One slice of bread; four soda crackers; three-fourths cup oatmeal, cracked wheat, corn meal; lean meat—one piece three inches long, two inches wide, one-half inch thick; the meat part of one thick lamb chop; one egg is 75 calories; five-eighths cup milk; cheese—one piece one inch square and one inch thick; butter—one level tablespoonful; four dates; two figs; one banana; one orange; one-half grapefruit; two apples; two pears; one potato; one-third cup cooked corn or beans; one cup beets, carrots, onions, parsnips, turnips, squash; two raw tomatoes; two cups canned tomatoes; five cups shredded raw cabbage; one small head cauliflower; four cups bouillon; one cup vegetable soup; one-half cup cream soup.

It will be noticed that only two meat items are mentioned on the list of foods containing 100 calories—one broiled lamb chop (the meat part) and one slice of lean meat three inches by two inches by one-half inch.

Calories of Meat.

With meats, the average serving of round steak is 150 calories; one slice of lean roast beef is 150 calories, one thick slice of juicy roast beef is 300 calories; one lean mutton chop is 150 calories; whereas one slice roast lamb leg is 230 calories.

Dairy products: one cube butter one inch by one inch by one inch is 100 calories; one glass of whole milk is 158 calories; one glass skim milk is 80 calories, or just about half.

With calorie charts at hand you can figure out how many calories you should eat daily. This depends upon your height and the kind of work you do. You simply multiply your ideal weight by 15 if you have an easy job indoors or by 20 if work is hard. Ideal weight for a man five feet seven inches is 147 pounds, with an increase of eight pounds for each inch over, or eight pounds less for each inch under. He thus requires 147 times 15=2,205 calories. A woman five feet four inches should weigh 130 pounds with six pounds more or less for each inch more or less than this height.

Overweights Tend Towards Diabetes

I MET a friend recently whom I had not seen for about two years. I had to look at him twice as he had lost considerable weight which greatly improved his appearance. His eyes were bright and I told him his loss of excess weight had given him a more youthful appearance. He then told me that a routine examination by his physician had discovered some sugar in his urine. His physician had told him that if he were willing to reduce his weight, he would likely prevent diabetes and the necessity of taking insulin.

By reducing his starch foods by half and his fat foods by one quarter, in a period of less than a year he had reduced his weight from 185 pounds to 135 pounds, the proper weight for his height and build. When he reached 135 pounds he increased his food intake slightly and during the two months previous to our meeting, his weight had remained at exactly 135 pounds.

Had this man not reduced his weight his chances of becoming a diabetic were great, because sugar was present in the urine and the amount of sugar in the blood was at the extreme limit of the amount present in normal urine.

There was no history of diabetes in his family but his physician's warning that overweight was a forerunner of diabetes so impressed him that he went immediately on the low-starch diet with the above excellent results.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Does a germ cause scarlet fever?
A.—Yes. A streptococcus.
Q.—What is a green stick fracture?
A.—A green stick fracture occurs in a young person up to 15 years of age but may occur later. The ends of the bone have not become solid with the rest of the bone and the bone "breaks" like the fibers in a green stick from a tree or bush when stick is bent or broken.

La Follette's no-third term stand against Coolidge returned to plague him . . . Ballot change worried Indiana Democrats.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON—Sen. Hiram W. Johnson of California played hob with his old friend, Sen. Robert M. La Follette when he made that speech about the third term over the radio shortly before the election.

Senator Johnson's "most unkindest cut of all" was in reading over the radio the list of United States senators who voted for the sweeping resolution adopted by the senate in 1928 against a third term for anybody. Of course he read the name of La Follette, for this resolution, it so happens, was both written and introduced by the senator from Wisconsin.

Wisconsin voters are not tightly bound by party ties. The La Follette family has been working for 50 years to break down party regularity.

The trouble is that the Wisconsin voters have been taught to listen to the La Follettes and to study political issues without any thought of partisan bias. The La Follettes undoubtedly wanted their electorate to have a bias, but what they wanted was a bias in favor of the La Follettes, not in favor of any given party.

How successful this teaching proved is best demonstrated by the presidential election of 1924, when Wisconsin was the only state in the Union to give its electoral votes to Robert M. La Follette, father of the present Senator La Follette, then a senator and candidate for the presidency on the Progressive ticket with Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana as his running mate. Senator Wheeler, then as now, appeared on the senate list as a Democrat; he had been elected as a Democrat.

FOUGHT THIRD TERM

So four years later nothing was more natural than for the son of "Fighting Bob" to introduce a resolution really aimed at Calvin Coolidge, the man who had humbled his father in the previous presidential election. Most of the Democrats and Progressive Republicans in the senate at the time thought Coolidge would run for re-election, despite his previous statement that he did "not choose to run." So they all voted for the resolution.

But the wording of that resolution rose to plague them. It did not state their REAL reason, which was opposition to Coolidge. It put their stand on the highest and most patriotic grounds.

Not content with VOTING for the resolution, the senators who voted for it kept on TALKING about it for a while—in fact right up until the Republican convention nominated somebody else.

Wisconsin voters, unlike the voters of certain other states, took the views of "Young Bob" La Follette on this very seriously. They were proud of his prominence in putting this resolution through.

Be that as it may, they got all worked up about the dangers to this country's form of government and institutions which a third term for any man would bring. They thought they were on sound ground. Look at what Bob La Follette had said!

"Young Bob" found it very difficult to unsell them.

ADOPTS SPLIT BALLOT

It's always the privilege, legally, of the party in power in any state to change the rules in its own favor. It's a time honored custom in our politics. Sometimes, however, the judgment used in making the changes is not of the best.

At least that's the way the Democratic leaders in Indiana feel about something they did shortly after the nomination of Wendell Willkie by the Philadelphia convention.

What happened was that the Indiana Democratic leaders, realizing this state pride of the Hoosier voters, became alarmed lest Willkie run so well in Indiana that he would pull all the Republican nominees for state offices, particularly the governor and senator, through with him.

So they decided—as they then saw the situation—to throw Roosevelt overboard. What they did to carry out this plan was to rush a law through the legislative mill changing their form of ballot. Under the new law there was one ballot for the presidential electors, and another ballot for all other candidates. The theory is that the voter will mark the presidential ballot as he pleases, and then will mark the other ballot. The theory of course was that the Hoosier voter, anxious to see another Hoosier in the White House, would vote for Willkie on the one ballot, and then follow his normal bent in voting for governor, senator, representative and the other local officers.

Making Your Own Hook Rug Designs

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

ANTIQUE hooked rag rugs have a special charm because their designs show so much individuality. The women who made them, marked out their own designs on burlap, planned their own color schemes and dyed the rags. To draw a floral design, first make a circle and then a spiral line inside which becomes a rose. Two ovals with a triangle at the base become morning glories. Real leaves from plants and trees become tracing patterns for leaf designs. An oval cut from paper makes a pattern for a center medallion.

When making your own hook rug designs, always leave a hem allowance at least two inches wide to be turned under after the rug is hooked, and be sure to overcast the edge of the burlap as soon as it is cut. Center guide lines through the length and the width of the burlap will be helpful in balancing your design. The flowers and leaves may be cut out of paper pinned on the burlap, this way and that. When you get an arrangement that pleases, trace it to make your pattern.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' SEWING Book 5, gives more rug hooking designs and further suggestions about how to draw your own flower designs. Also directions for a hook rug in the old-fashioned shell design. No. 5 contains descriptions of the other numbers in the series. To get your copy, address:

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble. If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need. Eat this crunchy toasted cereal regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Expanding Business Creates More Jobs

LaSalle Map of Business Conditions

Current business conditions as they affect every area of the United States are reflected in this map prepared by La Salle Extension University of Chicago.

By L. G. ELLIOTT
(President, LaSalle Extension University)

More goods are being turned out by our mills and factories than at any other time in the last 10 years. The continued increase in business activity has pushed factory pay rolls and consumer buying steadily higher. They are now over 10 per cent above a year ago, and retail trade prospects for the next few months are promising.

Over 1,000,000 persons have been put back to work during the past year, and employment in industry is continuing to improve. The added purchasing power that is provided is increasing the demand for manufactured goods and farm products.

The increase has taken place in every part of the country and in most of the major lines of industry. The largest gains in recent weeks have been made in those industries which are most directly affected by the armament program and by large governmental expenditures. The trend is upward, and indications point toward further expansion.

THE DICTATOR AT HOME

Dictator (getting out of bed)—Draw me my tub!

Wife—Don't be funny. You're big enough to turn faucets.

Dictator—I'm not accustomed to having my orders disobeyed in that way.

Wife—Well, that's just too bad. Quiet, please. I want to sleep a little longer.

Dictator (from the bathroom)—Ella, where's my shaving cream?

Wife—How should I know where your shaving cream is? And don't yell so!

Dictator—I put it on the second shelf and it ain't here. I've looked everywhere.

Wife (getting up and finding it right on the second shelf)—Right under your nose, yet you couldn't find it. And you're the fellow who is always finding new outlets to the sea!

Dictator (dressing)—I think I'll wear my blue uniform of an aviation general today.

Wife—That funny getup!

Dictator (hurt)—I don't think it's funny.

Wife—Of course not. If you did you wouldn't wear it in all those news reel pictures. Put on your tan uniform of a cavalry colonel. That ain't so hot, either, but it fits.

Dictator—I'm wearing my blue uniform!

Wife—Okay. If you want to look like a monkey, it's your own business.

Dictator—The trouble with you is you don't know a good uniform when you see one. I know style, I do. I know class. I know distinction. (But he puts on the tan uniform.)

Wife (at breakfast)—You've got egg on your chin, honeykins.

Dictator—Don't call me honeykins. These eggs are too soft, anyhow.

Wife—They're four-minute eggs.

Dictator—They couldn't have been boiled over three minutes.

Wife—Four minutes!

Dictator—Three minutes!

Wife—Four!

Dictator—Three! And what are you laughing at?

Wife—I'm laughing at your inadequacy in debate. If you can't even win an argument over eggs, how do you get away with all those arguments over the destiny of nations?

Dictator—Enough of this! I'm going down to the office where I can find some respect.

Wife—On your way home tonight, stop at the butcher's and bring me some liver for the cat.

Dictator—I don't know that I will be coming that way.

Wife—You heard me. Liver for the cat.

Dictator—Oh, all right. But, listen, have dinner early. I've got a big conference on about affairs in the Mediterranean.

Wife—Not tonight. We've a dinner and bridge engagement at the Spurgeons.

Dictator—You'll have to call it off.

Wife—That's what you think. We made this date a month ago and we can't break it. Now run along like a nice boy.

Dictator (hopelessly)—Gee, Ella, can't I ever have my own way in anything?

CAN YOU BEAT IT?

The ultimate in dog love is reported by a woman who was trying to get another woman on the telephone the other day. The wire seemed constantly busy. A protest to the complaint operator brought the information that the phone was evidently out of order. The woman making the call finally told over to her friend's house and motored about the trouble.

"Oh, yes," replied her friend, "I've had the receiver off the hook for the last hour so Fido can get her nap. She's awfully nervous lately."

JESUS' CONCERN FOR LIFE AND HEALTH

LESSON TEXT—Luke 7:24-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.—John 10:10.

Physical life and bodily vigor are secondary in importance to spiritual life and health. Most people do not believe that, but it is true. Nevertheless our physical well-being is of great importance, for it is evident that the spiritual and mental side of man can function in a physical body. That makes it a primary concern of man to keep his body alive and, what is more, keep it as well and strong as possible, an effective instrument for the service of God and man.

With his emphasis on the physical, man tends, when sickness comes, to seek the help of man in overcoming the difficulty. Soon they find that only God is sufficient for their need, and He whom they have hitherto ignored is appealed to in prayer. Men and organizations quick to grasp an opportunity to set themselves forward appear as so-called faith healers. We need to stress the fact that men may come direct to Christ who is concerned about their bodies and their health and that they may come without intermediary, simply by faith in Him.

I. The Outreach of Faith (vv. 2-8).
Three things appear here and they each have value and importance.

1. Action (vv. 2-5). The centurion was a good man and so kind toward the Jews that he had built them a synagogue. (One wonders whether a Roman soldier of today would show such a spirit.) He was compassionate, stirred by the illness of a slave. He had a need which no man could meet. Where should he turn? Someone told him about Jesus. Blessed and fruitful testimony! He acted in faith and sent word to the Master. He acted on his knowledge. Let your faith also become active.

2. Humility (vv. 6, 7). Socially and officially the centurion was far above Jesus, but he recognized His Lordship and knew himself to be unworthy that Christ should enter his house. True faith is humble. It has nothing to do with the brazen commanding of God which some seem to regard as such a magnificent evidence of faith. Watch for the mark of genuine and courteous humility if you would find men and women of faith.

3. Confidence (vv. 7, 8). There is nothing like this assurance of faith anywhere; in fact, Jesus said He had not seen it in all Israel. Knowing the manner in which his commands were carried out within the realm of his authority and recognizing Jesus as the Son of God, the centurion without hesitation accepted His absolute power over sickness. "Thank God! the centurion was right about that. Sickness is absolutely subject to the word of Jesus and so also are demons, sea and wind, and death itself (Luke 4:35, 36, 39; Mark 4:39; John 11:43, 44)" (Bradbury).

II. The Reward of Faith (vv. 9-15).
First of all we note that faith in God brings not only the individual but those round about him a real

1. Blessing (v. 9). The faith of this man delighted the heart of Jesus with a great joy. He commented on it and commended it to those round about. The story of it has come down through the centuries to stir us and stimulate us to belief in Christ. Faith in Him brings blessing, not only to the immediate beneficiary and at the moment, but lives on in blessing to others. Do we have that kind of faith? We also note that it resulted in

2. Healing (v. 10). Faith gets results because it releases the omnipotence of God. The young man was healed at the word of Jesus, in response to the centurion's faith. In the closing verses of our lesson we see also the

3. Raising of the Dead (vv. 11-15). The mighty and compassionate Son of man met a poor widow from whom death had taken her only stay and comfort—a young man. She was apparently too deeply stricken to even call on Jesus for help, but one can almost feel her faith leap to His words, "Weep not." His divine voice then reached into the next world and called the young man back to life. The day that had started as the saddest and darkest in her life closed as the most blessed and joyful in her experience, because she had met Jesus.

Reader, have you met the tender, loving, omnipotent Jesus? He wants to be your Saviour, Lord, and ever-present friend. Will you let Him into your heart? Now?

A Wise Evaluation
What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ.—Phil. 3:7, 8

Use the rinsing water from milk bottles to water house plants. This water will make them healthy.

To keep muslin curtains even when laundering them, put two curtains together and iron as one curtain.

Cottage or cream cheese moistened with orange juice makes a delicious filling for peach or pear salads.

To shorten the baking time for apple pie 20 minutes, first cook the apples five minutes in a small quantity of water, then cool them and proceed as usual.

"Rene would have hated it, Marty. He would have hated Hollywood and all the fanfare."

"Yes," Marty shook his head. "Life's queer. A great artist has to die to make a great movie star."

"I may fail you, Marty." "You know you won't. Even if you were a stupid woman, you couldn't fail with the looks God gave you. And you aren't stupid. They'll love you."

They went on over to the Astor for a hot drink. Lynn was shivering. They'd been standing a long time there in the cold. Marty leaned across the table and scanned the features he loved so well.

"You've improved, you're older, and your features are more refined. That schoolgirl look has gone. It's becoming, Lynn. Yes, you've improved."

Later when they started for home Lynn said: "Come, I've got to send a cable to Chuck and Helen. I promised."

"Contract signed; off for Hollywood next week." That told the news.

"I'll write them later."

When they got to Lynn's apartment neither had any idea of sleep.

"Come up a while, Marty. I'm too excited to feel I can ever sleep again!" They climbed the dusty stairs. When they came into the warm studio full of Rene's pictures Lynn threw her hat on the table, took out the contract. She waved it above her head.

"Well, we did it." She laughed a little. Her face sobered. "I can pack up this time, forever." She turned to Marty: "There's only one reason I hate to leave New York, Marty. That's you."

Marty could not answer. He could not tell her that the city of 7,000,000 would seem empty indeed when she had gone. He forced a smile.

"I'll be out to see you. When you're famous, you won't forget me?"

"You talk such nonsense. But will you come?"

"Of course I'll come!" he promised. But he knew he would not. Life was like that. Then he said good night to America's future star.

CHAPTER XXXVI

The Washington Square studio apartment was bare again. Lynn was ready to leave for Hollywood. Rene's pictures were packed. Lynn had a new trunk, all neatly filled with her clothes. This time the break was final. She'd never again come back to the Square.

The last week had been an exciting one. There had been pictures, publicity. Lynn took three days and went up to Maine to see her sister. It would be a long time before she came back East she knew.

Today, Lynn had to dispose of a few remaining things in the studio.

The moving men arrived to distract her, and began hauling out the little remaining furniture. For Madam Reanoud had insisted that Lynn go home with her that last night. They were to pick up her bags on the way to the train. When the furniture had gone, the room was bare except for the trunk, the bags and boxes, an old kitchen table that came with the apartment.

"Two years since Rene and I landed here in New York," she mused.

How the time flew! It was well toward noon. She must hurry. She dressed in a rush, in one of the new smart black frocks. It was while she was doing the last snap that there was a knock on the door. She ran to open it. A man was standing in the doorway. There was snow on his coat. In the dim light of the hall Lynn could not see well.

"Yes?"

He did not answer, but stepped into the bare apartment. It was Wild Austin. For a long time they stood there, those two, in silence. Lynn swayed a little, put her hand out against the half open door.

"Lynn," the sound of his voice broke her heart. She could not bear it.

Wild pushed the door shut. Suddenly he took her into his arms, buried his face in her gorgeous hair. But still he could find no words. Lynn's face was hidden in his snow dampened overcoat.

"My dear! My dear!"

Lynn's knees were weak. Even now she did not believe. She realized she was weeping bitterly. It had been so long. She had given up hope. And now... he was here.

Wild looked about the denuded apartment, picked Lynn up in his arms, carried her over to the kitchen table, the only remaining stick of furniture in the place, and lifted her upon it.

"I've come back, Lynn," he said, taking her hands from her face. His arms were about her again, and his lips on hers. Into that kiss went all the suffering of the last year. It was many minutes before either of them could find words. They were unnecessary. He was there. That was all Lynn asked. Only now she was in his arms did she realize how desperately lonely she had been.

"I love you, darling; I always will," he whispered.

There could never be any question between them again. He knew that now, and his own eyes were wet with sudden tears. Words were of no use to either of them in this moment. They had both been through too much. Suddenly, Wild lifted her off the table.

"Get your hat on."

She obeyed him meekly, her hands trembling so she could hardly put the little black hat over her blond hair. He held her coat for her. But when she had slipped it on, he kissed her again.

"Now, forward, march! I've got a car waiting."

"Where are we going?"

"To be married." Lynn's eyes were wide.

"Now?"

"Within twenty minutes. Just as soon as we can get to the City Hall."

"But..."

"Come. Rene sent me to you, Lynn."

She stood quietly before him, her hands at her throat. "But, I'm going to Hollywood. My contract—"

"Where is it? Let me see it."

With uncertain fingers Lynn got the precious paper out of her handbag. Wild grabbed it, tore it to bits. They fluttered to the floor at Lynn's feet.

"There. That settles that. Come."

Wild, his arm about Lynn, hurried her down the long hall, the dark stairs, out to the street, where a car was waiting. Inside, he wrapped Lynn in a rug, put his arm about her and explained.

"I telephoned my attorney from the boat yesterday to get a special license. We just docked and I went to his office and got it. Simple." He kissed her again, regardless of the truck driver alongside of their car, who seemed to be thoroughly enjoying the show.

On the drive downtown, Wild talked little. He was too intent on his purpose. They did stop at a florist's for orchids. Wild pinned them on Lynn's coat. When the car stopped at the City Hall, Wild turned to Lynn:

"Darling, I'll give you one chance of freedom. Will you ever be sorry? Sorry about Hollywood?"

"Never."

That was all he wanted to know. It was a queer wedding, all very business-like. Wild had made his plans carefully. His attorney, waiting to be a witness, had planned everything, even to the friendly Judge who was waiting to marry them.

"Did you get the ring? Good!"

Lynn, still hardly believing, found herself making the required responses. Three minutes, and Wild's ring was on her finger and he bent and kissed her.

"Much happiness, Mrs. Austin," he murmured in her ear. He was laughing happily, and Chalmers, his attorney, was congratulating him.

"Now for heaven's sake, maybe we can talk!"

"I've reserved an apartment for you at the Waldorf. Mrs. Austin's bags will be there shortly. I sent for them," Chalmers said with a smile.

"You think of everything!" Austin said as they left.

Thirty minutes later, Mr. and Mrs. Austin were ushered into their suite and Lynn, still with that odd feeling of unreality realized it was like the one which Katzman had occupied on that night a week ago when she had signed her contract.

He took off Lynn's little hat and her coat, and drew her over to the sofa with him.

"There is so much to say. I don't know where to begin. But first I want to tell you we're going to Florida tomorrow. The family isn't there. We'll have the house to ourselves."

It was not until the waiter had served their luncheon and they had finished it, that Wild began his story. She was close beside him in the big chair as he talked.

"Darling, what I've been through!"

She could not answer, but as he looked down into her eyes he knew what she was thinking.

"You think because I was in strange lands, it was easy for me." He laughed a little. "It wasn't. I was worse. Every time I saw a lovely sunset, or a fine old temple—well, it would come back. I'd know it was spoiled for me always, because you weren't with me. I knew it would always be that way!"

He was silent for a little as though trying to find the right words: "I was with Rene when he died, Lynn." Lynn's face was white as he spoke.

"We talked a lot." Wild held the hand that had his wedding ring on it. "He loved you better than I do. He loved you enough to give you up."

Then Wild told Lynn of Rene's last illness, how he had called for her, when he was too ill to notice anybody about him.

"I had the doctor send that cable, Lynn. If you had come, and Rene had lived, I'd have gone away. He needed you so. He just didn't seem to have any direction to his life with you away. I could see."

"And I thought he was in love with somebody else... when he asked for his freedom!"

Much later, Wild spoke of Chuck and Helen: "I was coming back, coming to get you as Rene wanted me to, even before I saw them. Then they got that cable from you about Hollywood. I flew to Paris and caught the first boat."

He was his old, arrogant self, confident, happy: "I wasn't jealous, I knew you, even when I heard gossip about you and Terry, and even you and Chuck! But Hollywood... that was something else, I wasn't sure, not until I saw you! You might have changed."

As Wild had planned, they left for Florida the next night. Mr. and Mrs. Austin came down to see them off, and they were kind. It was the last bit of happiness Lynn asked. For Mrs. Austin knew now where her son's real happiness lay. Chuck had convinced her of that. Down South Lynn gradually came to believe her happiness was real.

One night they were standing looking out of the windows through which Lynn had gazed unseeing that night so long ago when she first came into the Austins' big house. She was wearing her emerald again. Mrs. Austin had sent it on with a letter to Lynn which made her very happy. Wild stood with his arm about his wife, watching the moonlight or the ocean below them. The air was heavy with flowers.

"Happy?" he asked. Lynn, her head against his breast, did not even answer, only held his hand tight.

"You'll never be sorry... even about Hollywood?"

They both laughed a little at that, for poor Katzman had been wild. There had been a barrage of telegrams and threats.

"I'll never be sorry, Wild."

"Not even if you were to be a great picture star?"

Lynn moved closer into his arms.

"I never wanted to go to Hollywood, Wild."

"You're sure? Maybe in a few months you'll sometimes wonder..."

She turned, stood on tiptoe and kissed him. "You know I won't!"

Austin, holding her close did not answer. He was confident, for he too knew that Lynn Austin would never regret.

The Tinley Park Vol. Fire Department met Tuesday night.

Armistice Day was quietly observed here.

The new concrete crossing on Oak Park ave., was opened to traffic the latter part of last week. The new crossing is a fine improvement. It is reported the electric crossing gates will be installed a little later.

Tuesday of this week two fine electric refrigerator show cases were installed in the Vogt Dept. Store. One case is for meats, the other for fruits and vegetables. These new additions to the store are a most noteworthy improvement and will be appreciated by the public.

R. N. A. HOLD GUEST NIGHT

Dewdrop Camp No. 2023, Royal Neighbors of America, held a guest night, November 12th at the Tinley Park school gymnasium. A guest officer held each of the stations and many camps were represented, Chicago Heights, Mokena, Frankfort, Orland Park and Logan Square.

The altar and background was decorated with baby chrysanthemums. Miss Fitzhenry, orator of Chicago Heights acted as orator for the evening. The guest, Carrie Krieger, District Deputy, was greeted in song by the assistant marshal, Ruth Freitag of the Tinley Park Camp. She gave a lovely address and remarks were made by members of the different camps represented. A sketch representing the umbrella campaign was put on by two of the Tinley members, Dulcie Murphy and Dena Hansen. Each was dressed in a raincoat and galoshes carrying a very worn umbrella overhead and each had an umbrella in their hand holding the gifts from the camp to the visiting neighbors holding stations. The marshalls assisted in distributing the gifts. The Tinley orator, Helen Chapman, thanked all who participated in making it such a lovely evening and invited all to stay for refreshments.

The tables were decorated in purple runners and had vases of baby chrysanthemums. The guests table had a lovely center piece denoting the umbrella campaign. Each one had a box lunch tied in purple crepe paper with a tiny umbrella perched on top, containing lovely sandwiches and home made cake and candy. Coffee was served. It surely was a lovely evening and was much enjoyed by all.

HENRY DUFF HOME BURNS

The home of the Henry Duff family in Blue Island was destroyed by fire during the high wind Monday evening. The family had just sat down at the supper table when they smelled smoke and within a few seconds the dwelling was a roaring inferno. The high wind whipped up the flames and the fire department could not save much of the place. All the furnishings and clothing was destroyed. Mr. Duff also lost many valuable books and a highly prized stamp collection. Many antiques also burned.

Mrs. Duff is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Brueggemann of Tinley Park. The Duff children are staying with the Brueggemann family for the time being while their parents are making their temporary home with Mrs. Duff's brother, Allen. Mr. Duff who is engaged in the insurance business, is well known in Tinley Park.

Ernest Rice and son Forrest returned Sunday morning from a trip to Erie, Pa., where they visited with relatives the past week.

Miss Bernilda Stuckey was honored with a miscellaneous shower in the home of Hilda and Laura Willie last Thursday evening. The home was beautifully decorated in pink and blue. Aeroplane bunco was played with prizes going to Sylvia Steunkel, Nellie Steinborn and Dick Willie who in turn presented them to the bride-to-be. Miss Stuckey received many useful and beautiful gifts. She will become the bride of Richard Willie Jr., November 16 at 7:30 p. m. in St. Peters Evangelical and Reformed church at Frankfort.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our neighbors and friends for their many deeds of kindness and sympathy shown us in the illness and death of our husband and father. We also thank Father Boyle for his kind words and Mr. Hirsch for his services.

Assessed Valuations

3 Per Cent Lower

Personal property tax valuations for the thirty townships of Cook County outside Chicago total $72,618,304 for 1940, it has been announced by Assessor John S. Clark. The total assessed valuation in these towns is three per cent less than last year.

The reduction was caused by the Supreme court decision in the case of Hart vs. Toman, which held that stocks of out-of-state corporations are exempt from taxation when tangible property is assessed against the company. The net loss to the assessment roll is only three per cent because of considerable gains in the assessments of corporations and unincorporated businesses. The ruling caused a loss of about $4,000,000 in the assessment against individuals, but the increases against corporations and businesses reduced this loss to $2,147,019. This amounts to $195,593 in tax money, figuring the Chicago 1939 rate of $9.11 per $100 of assessed valuation.

Increases in the assessments of corporations and other businesses are due to improvements in business conditions and to a more complete check by field staffs and local assessors.

Third District Women's Clubs Meeting Nov. 19

The Third District will hold its first fall meeting on Nov. 19th at Gage Park fieldhouse with the Gage Park club as hostess. The morning session will convene at 10:15 a. m., and the first hour will be devoted to round table conferences held by Third District chairmen for the benefit of chairmen of local clubs. Mrs. W. G. Suthers will address the American Citizenship chairmen on the organization of Girl's States, an organization to the Boys' States now functioning. Mrs. Mable Simpson, of the Citizens Schools Committee, will speak to the Education chairmen on "The Picture of the Chicago Schools." Following these conferences, Mrs. A. W. Ohlin, president of the Gage Park club will welcome the guests and Mrs. Thomas Gifford, president of the Third District, will respond. After the invocation, the pledge of allegiance and the recital of the preamble, a panel discussion of the General Federation council held in Milwaukee last May will be presented by the following presidents: Mrs. R. M. Bennett, Beverly Hills, Mrs. F. H. Baldwin, Tinley Park, Mrs. Clyde S. Stow, of Morgan Park, Mrs. Wm. Johnson, Englewood, Mrs. E. R. Walter, Brainerd, and Mrs. James Mason, Third District Junior president.

Mrs. E. D. Chapman, Third District chairman of the Park Ridge school for girls, will introduce two of the pupils in vocal duets and moving pictures of the various activities at the school will be shown. In the afternoon the program will be presented under the auspices of four of the Third District chairmen, including Mrs. H. T. Simpson, American Citizenship, Mrs. Merle S. McCarney, International Relations, Mrs. Guy H. Moses, Legislation, and Mrs. H. E. Nagler, Civil Service. The first offering will be the presentation of the colors by the Lindblom high school R. O. T. C., after which there will be a greeting from the honored guests, Mrs. Wm. T. Bruckner, president of the Illinois State Federation. Prof. Paul Douglas of the University of Chicago, also alderman of the city of Chicago, will address the assembly on "The Making of Mechanics of Government", and Miss Jean Caul of Blue Island, who won first prize in the state contest last year, will read her prize winning essay, "Why We Should Retain Our Democracy." Rev. Kenneth Hildebrand of the Chicago Lawn Presbyterian church, will speak on the subject, "America—Peace or War," and the afternoon session will then be closed with a most impressive pageant of flags. Every club in the district is expected to be represented with its flag and, if possible, its American Citizenship chairman, to participate in the parade of flags, which will end on the platform where, under the massed colors, the national anthem will be sung.

As in every assessment since 1937 taxpayers were not required to declare ordinary household furnishings, and full value of intangibles was reported at 10 per cent of market value, or twice the annual income, whichever was lower. Assessed value is 37 per cent of full value.

Assessed valuations for local townships are:

Red Cross Workers To Put Drive Over the Top

time membership of the American Red Cross has begun this week. The volunteer workers to carry the annual membership Roll Call to Mokena and vicinity are members of the local Red Cross class on "Home Hygiene and care of the sick," their names following herewith: Mrs. Laura Bartels, Mrs. Alma Bruns, Mrs. Agnes Hayden, Mrs. Maude Larson, Mrs. Gladys Needham, Mrs. Minnie Nebeker, Mrs. Adeline Rabinov, Miss Ada Summler, Mrs. Vivian Schoop, Mrs. Margaret Thiel, Mrs. Clifford White and Mrs. Reta Sorensen. Walter Hirschbach, rural chairman of the Will County chapter, appointed Everett Cooper as Roll Call chairman of the Mokena branch.

These Red Cross Workers are making a house to house canvass and with your kind help, dear reader, will bring Mokena's quota of 75 members or more over the top.

As stated in the previous issue of the News-Bulletin, the following articles will be devoted principally to some of the more important demands made on the American Red Cross. One of them and that right now is the Red Cross work connected with the present national defense plan. Let us emphasize this by quoting abstracts of a report from Chairman Norman H. Davis of the Red Cross. He reported increases of ten to forty per cent in the volume of work pertaining to Red Cross operations at Army, Navy and Marine Corps Stations throughout the nation, in recent months. "That the organization had completed plans to expand its services in proportion to the growth of the military forces"—and, if you recall that the defense plan is for the mobilization of a 4,000,000-man army, the American Red Cross will have its busiest year since the world war. The report further states that "the U. S. War and Navy Departments are satisfied that the work as conducted at present by the American Red Cross constitutes one of the most essential phases of national defense, since it bears directly upon that factor which underlies all aspects of military life—Morale."

The report states "The widespread movement of troops incidental to the reorganization of the army and the maneuvers in the field will result in many dislocations among families and other dependents of the enlisted men affected." So many men have been subject to sudden transfers to new stations or to assignments for training at distant points. This calls for many adjustments in family life, which for the enlisted man on his limited pay, is often a difficult matter.

The service mentioned above is founded upon the established fact that anxiety, worry and fear are detrimental to physical and mental health. These factors play an important part, since the morale of the service man is unfavorably affected by anxiety over conditions existing with his family at home. The Red Cross, with its nation wide chain of communication and its units serving at military and naval stations and hospitals is equipped to apply the necessary mitigating measures.

The activities consist of general welfare services for the relief of distress among the families of service men; medical, social and recreation service for the patients under treatment in U. S. hospitals. The service includes assistance to those men returning to civilian life with disabilities sustained in the military service and to their dependents. Let us not forget that this is only one of the many services given by the Red Cross.

Emphasis should also be stressed on another part of the Red Cross service, namely that of the Red Cross nurse. According to Miss Mary Board, national director of the American Red Cross Nursing Services, the U. S. Army will call more than 4,000 Red Cross nurses to active duty by next July. These nurses will be drawn from the 17,000 nurses enrolled in the first reserve of the Red Cross. "Rising demands upon the Red Cross Nursing Reserves due to the expansion of National defense forces" Miss Board declared "makes it imperative that all qualified nurses in the nation enroll at the first possible moment." Our national defense also requires thousands of public health officers. To fill this need the Red Cross is encouraging enrollment of all active and inactive nurses at this time. Qualifications will be that of the Red Cross, namely: graduation from an approved school of nursing; registration as provided by state law; affiliation with the American Nurses Association; American Citizenship; and single, widowed or divorce status; under 35 years of age.

Total reserve of the Red Cross nursing service now numbers more than 43,000. Of that total some 26,000 are in the Second Reserve composed of nurses over 40 years of age, or married, but still active and available for all types of service except military duty. The Red Cross has announced plans to train additional numbers of volunteers to serve as nurses aids in major metropolitan hospitals throughout the country. The course calls for 100 hours of lectures, classroom practice and practical field work under the direction of a qualified registered nurse.

Red Cross public health nurses last year cared for 334,194 cases by making a total of 1,038,363 visits in urban and isolated rural areas. In schools and clinics, Red Cross nurses assisted physicians in examining 618,623 children for the purpose of describing corrective treatment. In its other work, 638 Red Cross nurses were on duty in 459 communities. In its educational work, the Nursing Service conducted 4,440 classes in Home Hygiene and care of the sick the past year, certifying 61,885 persons in 868 chapters. So much for the activities of the American Red Cross as far as they relate to the military and naval welfare service. Next week's issue of this paper will present the aid given by the Red Cross to civilian relief and disaster relief. In the mean time do not forget to help our Mokena volunteer workers to make their membership drive a big success.

With your certificate of membership you will also receive a Red Cross sticker which we ask that you kindly display prominently in your window or in your car. Also wear your Red Cross button during the period of this drive.

1940 Call for Red Cross Recruits

The 1940 Poster of The American Red Cross sounds the call to the nation to serve humanity within the ranks of this army of mercy.

KEEPING step with the boys called to the colors in America's new defense army and navy, will be the American Red Cross, fulfilling its mission of service to the men in the line and to their loved ones at home, Chairman Norman H. Davis announced in Washington.

"Several thousand Red Cross nurses already have been called to the colors," Mr. Davis said, "and Red Cross field directors, and thousands of Red Cross workers in Chapters throughout the nation, are ready to help America's soldiers and sailors with personal problems, just as in the 1917-18 World War period.

"Every patriotic man and woman in the United States, who wants to do his or her share in upholding the national defense of our nation, can do so by sharing in the vitally important work of the Red Cross. Join as a member of the local Chapter, during the roll call, November 11 to 30, and through your support you will strengthen the Red Cross army of mercy.

"Recruits are needed not alone as members, but also as volunteer workers in the Red Cross Chapters."

Red Cross work will continue undiminished in its usual domestic program of relief in disaster; community public health nursing; safety education and promotion of the Junior Red Cross. An individual membership supports all of this work, not only in Red Cross Chapters, but in the nation. Relief to war victims in Europe is financed by the $20,000,000 war relief fund contributed by the public during the summer of 1940.

Paul Derringer
The phrase "Kentucky rifleman" is authentic, for I have eaten the venison that followed in the wake of Paul Derringer's unerring aim on the trail of a deer.

In the last few years any number of batters have had a harder time in the wake of his fast ball, curve and control.

Paul Derringer played a leading role in the Red drive for the last two years, despite the fact that seven years ago he was rated all through and on his way over the hill. That was the year that pitching for both Cardinals and Reds he won 7 games and lost 27, for the meager average of .206, far below tail-end form.

Six years after this dashing debacle Paul won 25 and lost 7, one of the most startling reversals I know in all sport.

Paul Derringer was born in Springfield, Ky., 34 years ago this coming October. He is around 6 feet 4, weighing 210 pounds.

He began unveiling his right arm in Danville in 1927, 13 years ago. In 1933 St. Louis traded Paul to Cincinnati for Leo Durocher and others now unknown. Both teams got star men.

Mandarin Durocher, now guarding the destinies of the Dodgers, would just as soon that Derringer had been traded to another club, preferably Brooklyn.

The Serious Athlete

Paul is what you would call a serious athlete. There is no great amount of levity in his nature. Those who don't know him might call him surly or sulky, but he isn't. Quiet people are often thrown into this class, when they should be awarded chaplets of laurel or wild apple blossoms.

Outside of baseball he likes to hunt and he doesn't mind being alone.

Today Paul Derringer comes close to being the best all-around pitcher in baseball. He is certainly the smartest.

Six years after he turned in his .206 average with the Reds he gave the same city a winning average of .781. This upward leap of 575 points is close to the high-jump record of all time. But it still belongs to Paul Derringer.

He was on his way over the hill seven years ago. He had made three World series starts and had lost them all. He had taken more than his share of hammering. But a year ago in his older age he won 25 games and he'll win 25 or more this season.

His main specialty seems to be one and two-hitters. He has been closer to more no-hit games than any pitcher in the trade.

Unless some peculiar series of episodes takes place, the same Derringer will be heard from in loud tones in the next World series.

Another Entry

You can add the name of Freddy Fitzsimmons to this all-star list.

Freddy was 39 years old on Sunday. The Dodger star began pitching for Muskegon in the Central league just 20 years ago. He stuck with the Giants for 13 years until Bill Terry decided there was no longer any winning stuff left in Freddy's right arm.

So Terry traded him to Brooklyn. This season, after 20 years of pitching, Fitzsimmons has already won 10 games for Brooklyn against a lone defeat. He has the highest pitching percentage in baseball.

Having packed away 202 major league victories, Fitz is just warming up. He has an all-time life average around .600, which is nothing to leer at after you have been around since 1920.

Fitz is one of the fine characters of baseball. He is one of the main credits to the game that has carried him along into middle age—middle age as far as active competition is concerned.

And with 10 out of 11 for 1940 he is now headed for his greatest year.

Those Who Come Back

The most somber line ever written in sport was this: "They don't come back."

Nothing was ever farther from the truth. No other line has ever had a more depressing effect on some stars.

The true fact is this, keep on coming back. We have just related the two cases of Derringer and Fitzsimmons. Then there is Schoolboy Rowe.

CARD OF THANKS

We want to extend our sincere thanks and appreciation to our kind neighbors, relatives and friends for their assistance during the sudden illness and death of our dear wife and mother, Henrietta Schweser. We want especially to thank Rev. Haele for his excellent sermon; the organist and quartette; those who donated the use of their cars; and those who sent the beautiful flowers.

Miss Adeline Semmler with a group of young people of Joliet attended grand opera last Friday night in Chicago and saw "Madame Butterfly."

Mr. Wm. Lowe left Sunday for Texas, Tennessee and New Mexico with the Rock Island 'Rocket' on an exhibition trip in which he will have charge of showing that train to the people of the southwest.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Michalek and son Richard and Louise Weiler who have been staying at the Bernard Homering home, have returned to their home in Lemont.

ORLAND PARK

During the heavy wind storm on Monday a barn on the Edw. Cowan farm was blown down. Minor damage was done to trees and signs.

Orland was without electricity for a number of hours when the storm put the line out of commission. Homes having electric ranges were unable to get the evening meal until the electricity came back on again.

Mayor Wm. Kollman, George Yunker, Judge Ray Brennan and Highway Commissioner Carl Borsett left for Allison, Iowa the forepart of the week on a pheasant hunting trip.

As the village hall was without lights Monday night due to the storm, the village board dispensed with the regular meeting.

The Adult Bible Class of the local Methodist church held their "Punkin Pie" social Wednesday night and a good time is the report.

The Orland Park Fire Dept., was called out Saturday morning to a big fire on the Fred Scheel farm in New Lenox township and made the run better than 75 miles per hour.

The annual Armistice Day dance sponsored by the Orland Park Legion Post last Saturday at Goodings Grove was quite well attended.

The Red Cross annual roll call drive has begun in Orland with Mrs. Sherman S. Knox, local chairman in charge of the drive.

ORLAND LEGION AUX. NEWS

The regular monthly meeting of the Orland Park Legion Auxiliary No. 526 was held Friday night, Nov. 8th in the Legion Hall at Orland Park.

The colorful ceremony of inducting six new members into the Auxiliary and Mrs. Peggy Freck's excellent program on National Defense made a most interesting evening at the close of which Mrs. Eva Bergurt served delightful refreshments.

Owing the severe storm the Armistice party planned by the Auxiliary for the Forty and eight Convalescent Center, had to be postponed to a future date.

Household News

By Eleanor Howe

It will soon be time for keeping open house, for the children will be home for the holidays, and friends will be dropping in at various and sundry hours. Great demands will be made upon your time, and even greater demands will be made upon your larder. Yet, you should be able to enjoy Thanksgiving with your family without becoming tired out.

A well-planned Thanksgiving dinner will insure an enjoyable and untiring day. Here is a menu you may like to use for your Thanksgiving dinner this year:

Fruit Cocktail
Olives Celery Pickled Onions
Roast Turkey with Dressing
Giblet Gravy
Mashed Potatoes Baked Squash
Cranberry Salad
Hot Rolls Butter
Hot Mincemeat Pie
Coffee

In the days of the Pilgrim Fathers, and indeed not so many years ago, Thanksgiving was one day of the year devoted not only to giving of thanks, but also to feasting. Not long ago I read of a menu that was served at a Thanksgiving feast. It contained not only roast turkey, but wild duck and several kinds of wild game. The vegetable dishes were innumerable, and even the desserts did not take a back seat when it came to quantity. With a menu such as this a good many hours were required for dining.

The simplified, modern version of the Thanksgiving feast is now just as thoroughly enjoyed. For it now leaves time for conversation and enjoyment; and the modern housewife enjoys this extra period of time for relaxation and visiting with friends and relatives.

Roast Turkey.

Allow $\frac{3}{4}$ to 1 pound of turkey per person served. Dress and clean.

Rub the inside cavity thoroughly with salt. Fill body and neck cavities loosely with stuffing. Truss. Brush well with unsalted fat and place on rack in large open roasting pan. (Store over night in refrigerator if desired).

The following time and temperature chart may be followed:

Weight of Bird	Oven Temperature	Approximate Cooking Time
Under 15 lbs.	325°-300°	2½-4 hrs.
16-18 lbs.	300°-275°	4-5 hrs.
20-22 lbs.	275°-250°	5-8 hrs.

Dressing for Turkey.

10 cups soft bread crumbs
1 cup butter (melted)
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup parsley (chopped)

2 tablespoons poultry seasoning
Mix all ingredients thoroughly and use for stuffing the turkey. Note:

This amount of dressing is sufficient for a 10-pound turkey. If a larger turkey is to be stuffed, the recipe should be increased proportionately.

Giblet Gravy.

Pour off liquid in pan in which turkey has been roasted. From liquid skim off 6 tablespoons fat; return fat to roasting pan and brown with 6 tablespoons flour. Add 3 cups stock in which giblets, neck, and tip of wings have been cooked; or if preferred, 3 cups milk may be substituted instead of the stock. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick; then season to taste with salt and pepper. Add giblets (cut in small pieces), heat well, and serve hot.

Cranberry Salad.

(Serves 10)

1 quart cranberries
2 cups water (boiling)
2 cups sugar
2½ tablespoons unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup nut meats (cut fine)
½ cup celery (cut fine)
½ cup tart apple (cut fine)

Wash cranberries. Place in saucepan, add boiling water and cook 10 minutes, or until cranberries are soft. Rub through sieve. Add sugar to the cranberry pulp. Return to saucepan and cook gently for 5 minutes longer, stirring frequently. Remove from range and add the gelatin, which has been softened in the cold water. Stir until dissolved and then chill until mixture just begins to thicken. Add nut meats, celery, and apple, and place in individual gelatin molds. Chill thoroughly, and serve in crisp lettuce cups.

Escalloped Oysters.

3 cups cracker crumbs (rolled fine)
½ cup butter (melted)
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 quart oysters
1 cup milk (approximately)

Mix cracker crumbs, butter, salt and pepper thoroughly. Spread layer of seasoned crumbs on bottom of buttered baking dish. Cover with half of oysters. Then add another layer of cracker crumbs, and the remaining oysters, and top with remaining cracker crumbs. Add sufficient milk to fill in all crevices and to bring liquid to surface of top cracker layer. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 45 minutes to one hour. Serve very hot.

Honey Almond Sweet Potatoes.

(Serves 6)

6 small sweet potatoes
½ cup honey
¼ cup hot water
½ cup almonds (ground)
1 tablespoon butter (melted)

Cook unpared sweet potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Cool, peel, and cut into halves lengthwise. Then place, cut side up, in buttered baking dish. Combine honey and water; add two tablespoons of this mixture and the melted butter to the ground almonds. Pour remainder of honey mixture over sweet potatoes and then top with the honey almond mixture. Place in a moderate oven (350 degrees) and bake 35 to 40 minutes, or until brown.

Zucchini Squash With Tomatoes.

(Serves 6)

3 medium-sized Zucchini squashes
3 slices bacon
1 medium-sized onion (cut in small pieces)

1 No. 2 can tomatoes
¼ teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste

Wash squashes and cut into ½-inch slices. Cook in boiling, salted water 8 to 10 minutes, or until tender. Drain. Cut bacon into small pieces and heat until fat is rendered. Add onion and saute until brown.

Add tomatoes and simmer for 5 minutes. Add squash and simmer 5 minutes longer. Add salt and pepper, and serve.

Household Hints.

With the holiday seasons approaching, you are going to have more to do; new household tasks, more social obligations, and larger meals to plan and to prepare. You may often wonder where you will find the extra time to do these extra tasks.

Miss Howe's book, "Household Hints," is just the book to help you with these duties. Her time-savers will fit right into your everyday routine, leaving you more leisure time for the new activities which will come up during the holiday season.

You may secure her book by writing to "Household Hints," care of Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and enclosing 10 cents, in coin.

THANKSGIVING

WNU Service.

"AN OLD-FASHIONED Thanksgiving dinner?" said Ma Hubbell doubtfully. "I—don't know. Do you think we'd better, pa?"

"I ain't sure's we had or not," candidly, "but it's been on my mind consider'ble the last few weeks, an'—an' I guess mebbe I'd like it; we'd both like it. Ye see, ma, I'm over 70 now, an' there can't be many more times. We've been down here to Florida twelve years, an' never a Thanksgiving dinner in all the time."

"I know, pa," huskily, "but it—never seemed like I could. An' I kind o' felt you wouldn't like it, either. We've never spoke of it together—but you remember the last time."

"Fifteen years ago," trying to keep his own voice firm and steady, but turning his face away from her. "Sometimes I've tried to think mebbe I was too harsh with him, an' too hasty; but when I've studied it all over, fair as could be, I've felt I'd have to do jest the same thing, the same way. There never was a black sheep in the Hubbell family from the time Great-Grandfather Hubbell's brother ran off to be a sailor, till—till our Enos—"

Ma Hubbell did not speak. Tears were twinkling silently down her cheeks.

"I've tried to think I was ha'sh," the old farmer repeated, "but couldn't. I tried to train Enos up to be a good farmer, to know the best way to grow things, an' the best way to sell 'em. An' Enos learned it all, too," with reminiscent gratification in his voice, "an' we were both proud of him. He was a good boy an' a good, sensible grower an' seller. Then all at once he commenced goin' wild, an' then he learned to play tricks so he could join the circus. Said he was tired of diggin' dirt an' wanted to see the world."

Ma Hubbell nodded. It was all just as fresh in her mind as in his, though neither of them had spoken of it in the long fifteen years.

"Then he came home for that Thanksgiving day," the old man went on, after a long silence, his face growing a little harder, "an' we killed the biggest turkey, an' after dinner I talked with 'im 'bout what we hoped an' the Hubbell family, an' what chances the world offered to strong young men. An'—an' he laughed in my face, an' used some pretty strong language. An' that night he went off an' got so drunk we had to bring him home. The next day I told him to go an' not come back any more. Then we sold the farm an' came down here. Seems as if neither of us could live on the old place after that."

Pa Hubbell walked heavily to a window, repeating to himself as he did so: "Mebbe I was too ha'sh with him, mebbe I was, though it never seemed so."

A slight drizzle was beginning to fall and already the ground was wet. Many turkeys and other poultry were pecking in a desultory manner about the kitchen door and between there and the barn, and out under the long shed the hired man was preparing some of the fowls for market. The farmer looked at him with unseeing eyes. At length he turned back into the room.

"I'm over seventy," he repeated, "an' you're pretty close to me, ma. We can't reasonably count for much longer. An' I've been thinkin' a lot about New England an' Thanksgiving dinners lately. I don't want to go back, but seems like I could relish a real old-timey dinner once more. Enos is likely dead long ago. Circus folks don't live long, they say. We—we can imagine him sittin' at the table with us, jest a little boy, like he used to be."

Ma Hubbell's lips quivered, but by a strong effort she stilled the quiver and turned to him what seemed a calm face.

"All right, pa," she agreed. "I'll start in at once, an' with the whole day before us I think Betsey an' me can get pretty much everything cooked up. The turkey we'll leave till mornin', for it'll taste better fresh-baked. But you'll have to buy me some cranb'ries in town, an' some raisins an' other things. I'll set 'em down. We can stew cranb'ries, an' mix an' bake some mince pies this evenin' after you get back. An' say, pa, if you should see anybody on the road, you'd specially like, you might ask 'em to dinner. 'Twould make it more sociable for you."

Pa Hubbell nodded and glanced through the window. He didn't see anything in particular because his thoughts were far away.

"Get your list ready," he said, "an' I'll go an' be gettin' the big farm truck ready. It's goin' to be a regular rain by an' by. Up on the farm it would be snow now, an' the truck would be a sleigh. Well, I want to be gettin' back if it's goin' to be an all night's rain. I guess there's enough poultry dressed for a nice truck-load by now, for Bill an' I picked forty turkeys an' as many hens last night. This lot I think I'd better take to the fashionable street, which has nice stores an' high-priced trade. Such turkeys as ours ought to sell well, bein' the day before Thanksgiving. An' I'll keep my eyes open for anybody I think will make good Thanksgiving company."

It was a full fifteen miles to the stores at Clearwater that Pa Hubbell had in mind, and though he started fairly early, and had a good truck, it was well toward noon when he slowed up and began to study the store fronts he was passing. At length he stopped before one.

"Fine big show of everything except turkeys," he thought, "an' they seem sca'se. Guess mebbe the owner will be glad to buy mine."

He swung his truck to the curb, clambered to the sidewalk and went inside. The store was well filled with customers and he went forward and began to look over some boxes of oranges and grapefruit marked "From Owner's Grove."

"Fine's I ever seen," he thought admiringly. "That owner must have grown up a farmer an' fruit-grower, sure. Must take home a dozen of these for ma."

The talk of the customers was coming to him from all sides and he listened interestedly.

"Why, you seem to know all about turkeys, sir," he heard one woman say.

"I ought to," laughed a voice which made Pa Hubbell start and crane his neck. "I was brought up on a farm and learned to know turkeys from the egg to the Thanksgiving table. Why, I almost believe I could look at a turkey and tell just how long it took to grow and what it fed on. But I'm sorry I've such a poor stock to show you, madam, I wish I had one of the birds my old father used to—"

A shaggy gray head suddenly loomed up beside the customer.

"I've brought a flock of 'em, son," Pa Hubbell announced grimly. "Just tell the lady to wait till I bring 'em in."

He started toward the door, but before he reached it a hand was on his shoulder.

"Father," a voice said huskily. "I—I didn't know—I thought—I went back to the place and—is mother—"

"We sold an' moved down here," briefly, "and your ma is alive an' well. No, you needn't say a word, son. Tomorrow's Thanksgiving an' we don't want any old sores opened. Your ma told me to bring out somebody to eat with us an' I'll take you. Now help me with the turkeys an' then ask your boss to let you off till day after tomorrow, when I'll bring you back."

The son laughed shakily, his hand slipping caressingly across the other's shoulders.

"I have no boss," he said. "You don't understand, father. I'm not dancing clogs now, nor drinking. I quit that more than ten years ago. I just couldn't keep it up, remembering all you and mother had taught me. Then I tried half a dozen other things and went broke on them all. At last I settled down to something I knew—something you had taught me—eggs, poultry, beef, mutton, farm produce, fruits and the like, and I've made good."

Pa Hubbell's mouth opened and shut and a great light came into his eyes. But all he said was, "Ma'll be glad. Of course you'll go right off?"

"Of course. I'll speak to the chief clerk about a few matters, and then—But I'm glad you have a truck, father, large enough to hold the whole bunch."

"The what?" looking bewildered.

"All of us. But I forgot. I suppose you don't know there are seven of us, wife, children and myself. The oldest boy is twelve, and named after you. Then there are girls of eleven and ten, and the younger boys. We live in rooms over the store."

Pa Hubbell lost command of himself.

"Five children—for Thanksgiving!" he shouted. "An' one of 'em a boy twelve years old!"

Then he whirled to the wagon.

"Come, help me out with these, quick!" he cried. "Then take me right upstairs to see 'em. Five! What will ma say?"

Imitation of Weathered

Pine Produced by Stain

A country house of the English type near Philadelphia holds new pine woodwork finished in exact imitation of weathered pine. The stain used to produce the effect was made by mixing one pound of raw sienna with one pound of burnt umber and an even teaspoonful of burnt sienna. All of these were oil colors. A half gallon each of turpentine and boiled linseed oil was added very gradually to thin the mixture thoroughly. The stain was then applied and immediately wiped away again with rags or waste. Each door or window was completely finished before leaving it. The following day, when the stain had dried, a small daub of quick drying black, ground in coach japan, was applied with the thumb for irregularity in each panel and blended with a dry rag or blender. When the entire finish became hard, another coating was added—this time of white lead barely tinted gray and thinned with turpentine and a small quantity of drier. Again each unit of door or window was entirely completed and rubbed before leaving it. The next day three coats of wax were applied, with polishing between coats. The floor was finished with the ground stain, applied evenly without lapping, and waxed. No wipe-off coats or daubs of black were used on the floor. It is possible to create the same effect by applying crude bichromate of potassium dissolved in water for a ground stain instead of the sienna-umber mixture.
